THE PURPOSE OF THE ORDER OF THE ARROW

To recognize those campers--Scouts, Explorers,
And Scouters who best exemplify the Scout Oath and Law in their daily lives and by such recognition cause other campers to conduct themselves in such manner as to warrant recognition.

To develop and maintain camping traditions and spirit.

To promote Scout camping, which reaches its greatest effectiveness as a part of the unit's camping program and to help strengthen the district and council camping program both year around and in the summer camp, as directed by the camping committee of the council.

To crystallize the Scout habit of helpfulness into a life purpose of leadership in cheerful service to others.

HISTORY OF THE ORDER OF THE ARROW

The beginning of a firm foundation - it is May 1915. Much of Europe is involved in what is to become the First World War. The United States is continuing its attempt to remain neutral, although in two years it will enter the fighting. For the time being, though, it is business as usual for most people. In Philadelphia a meeting is taking place which will result in the founding of an organization which will last at least seventy five years and have over one million members.

The young Boy Scouting organization, being only five years old in America, has found quick acceptance. Two years prior the Philadelphia Council decided to open a summer camp on the Delaware which is now known as Treasure Island. This being the first summer camp, the Directors of Treasure Island, after much discussion to determine who will direct the operation of the summer camp, named E.

Urner Goodman of Troop One as Camp Director and Carroll A. Edson as Assistant Camp Director.

These two gentlemen agreed that there should be some way of emphasizing the ideals of the Scouting movement during the summer. In preparation for his stay at Treasure Island, Mr. Goodman read several books. One of these, "Cave's Camp Book," describes an organization which is designed to perpetuate certain camp traditions and ideals from summer to summer. After discussing the book with Mr. Edson and drawing on the resources of the two fraternal organizations he worked with, it is decided that they will form a similar organization at the camp. Since it is known that the Delaware Indians used to inhabit the land of the camp, this new organization will be based on the Indian traditions, and a weekly council fire will be held.

As a result, they prepared a simple yet effective ceremony that, in turn, led to the organization of what was later to become known as the Order of the Arrow. It was agreed from the beginning that the procedures and programs of the organization were to be based on the ideals of democracy. In their initial decisions, Goodman and Edson reflected those ideals by planning to elect members into the first lodge from the troops encamped at Treasure Island. Thus, from the beginning, a unique custom was established in that the members are elected by nonmembers. There has been no change in this since that time. The original name, Wimachtendienk, Wingolauchsik, Witahemui was suggested by Horace W. Rolston, a Philadelphia Scouter. Rolston located a Lenni Lenape dictionary at the Pennsylvania Historical Society. Printed in 1888, it was based on manuscripts written by Moravians from the Bethlehem area. Thumbing through it, he found the Delaware word for "Brotherhood." When Dr. Goodman and Mr. Edson held planning discussions for this organization at the Scout office (then located at Independence Hall),

Mr. Rolston had often heard them mention the concept of brotherhood as being important in the formation of this group. Well, he thought this Indian word for it might be a good name for the organization. Besides, only those in the Brotherhood would know what this long word means, and Mr. Goodman had said that a little mystery would help. There was not enough time to mail the suggested name to Treasure Island, so Mr. Rolston headed for the nearest telegraph office. Unfortunately, the Moravians who had originally written the dictionary had a German background. As a result, all the words in the book have a Germanic spelling, which fits with the Lenape diction. When the telegraph operator got the message, he called his superior over. A word that big that looks German might be a code word. Since the United States was neutral, they might get in trouble by sending German messages. (If and how the word ever got to the camp is not known by many today.)

Friday, July 16, 1915, dawned bright and clear on Treasure Island. In addition to the heavy heat which often hangs over the valley of the Delaware, there was something else in the air. It was an almost indescribable feeling of expectancy and mystery. By sundown the air was charged with a tense excitement. Those who were present will always remember the first induction into what is now known as the Order of the Arrow.

As darkness fell, the campers were lined up in single file by Harry Yoder, who acted as guide and guardian of the trail. In total silence the campers followed the guide by a roundabout route through the woods to the site of the council fire. The path led down a small ravine across which lay an old fallen tree. The scouts were unaware that they were approaching the council fire until suddenly it was revealed. It was built in a triangular shape. Behind it in long black robes stood the co founders of the Order of the Arrow -- E. Urner Goodman, Chief of the Fire; and Carroll A.

Edson, Vice Chief of the Fire. The chief wore on his robe a turtle superimposed upon a triangle, denoting leadership, and the vice-chief of the fire, then called Sachem, wore a turtle without the triangle. (The turtle is the totem of the Unami Lodge.)

The original ceremony was quite different from that which developed later. There were three lessons taught that night:

*The candidate attempted to encircle a large tree, individually, with outstretched arms. Having failed, he then was joined by several of the brothers who together had no difficulty encircling the large tree, thus teaching the lesson of BROTHERHOOD.

*The candidate was directed to endeavor to scale a steep bank at the edge of the council ring. Failing in this, he again was assisted by the brothers, with whose help he was able to climb the elevation, thus teaching SERVICE.

*The candidate then was given a bundle of twigs and told to place some on the council fire, where the twigs caught fire and blazed brightly, thus showing CHEERFULNESS.

In the first year, 25 members were inducted into the Brotherhood. Many of the members wore a black sash with a white arrow on it. The black sash was used because it offered an excellent contrast to the white arrow. In the original plans there were two degrees; the first was much like a combination of the Ordeal and Brotherhood memberships, and the second an early version of the Vigil Honor.

To perpetuate the brotherhood, a membership meeting was held on November 23, 1915. George W. Chapman, the first lodge chief of the Unami Lodge, served as chairman of the organization committee. This meeting marked the first formal founding of the Order of the Arrow. Goodman and Edson served as advisers to the committee.

By 1917, news of the organization; Wimactendienk, Wingolauchsik, Witahemui, spread to other Scout camps and inquiries began. Goodman spoke to many interested Scouts and Scouters, and as a result lodges were established in New Jersey, Maryland, New York and Illinois.

From 1915 until 1921 the Order grew slowly. World War I kept Scouts and leaders busy with many other problems and projects. In 1921 steps were taken to establish the Order on a national basis. The early years had produced sufficient experience to form a foundation on sound basic policies.

The first national convention was held on October 7, 1921, in Philadelphia, at which a national lodge was formed, composed of four delegates from each of the local lodges. Out of this convention, plans for making the Order a brotherhood of honored campers' was adopted. The Order of the Arrow became an official program experiment of the Boy Scouts of America in 1922. For several years conventions of the National Lodge were held annually. After 1927, they were held at 2-year intervals.

On June 2, 1934, at the National Council Annual Meeting in Buffalo, N.Y., the Order of the Arrow program was approved by the National Council.

In May 1948, the Executive Board, upon recommendations of its Committee on Camping, officially integrated the Order of the Arrow into the Scouting Movement. The Order's National Lodge was dissolved and supervision shifted to the Boy Scouts of America.

THE BEGINNING OF LODGE 383

Tahosa Lodge 383 of the Order of the Arrow was organized in 1948. The ceremony was held on the Friday night of the first week of the summer camp season. There on the shore of the lake behind the lookout tower at Camp Tahosa, the Camp Director, Mr. L.L. "Tiny" Lewis "gathered the clan" of candidates. It was here Mr. Lewis, being one of the candidates himself, administered the ceremony. The charter members of our Lodge are; L.L. "TINY"

LEWIS, ART RAVIREZ, CHARLES LIVINGSTON, JOHN MANSFIELD, HAROLD SCRIBNER, BOB HARRIS, and DR. WALTER CHAPMAN.

After the charter ceremony the ritual team was organized; they were as follows; Allowat Sakima - John Mansfield, Meteu - Charles Livingston, Nutiket - Bob Harris, Kichkinet - Art Ravirez. The ceremonial team wore uniforms as costumes were not available.

On October 26, 1948 the Lodge organization was set up and the Constitution and bylaws were adopted. Throughout this year of organization, Bob Harris served as Lodge Chief.

THE TOTEM OF TAHOSA LODGE

The totem of Lodge 383 is a sturdy little mountaineer called the cony. He is known by many common names in the high mountains of North America such as cony, little chief, haymaker, whistling hare, rock rabbit and mouse hare. His true name is Pika and he is a member of the Rabbit Family. High on Colorado's mountains are the home of this soft-furred little mammal that looks frail and vulnerable. Gusty alpine winds ruffle his coat and whip his ears. Yet he is incredibly tough, for nature has adapted him over the centuries to flourish in one of the severest of habitats. Smaller than a guinea pig, they have no tail, short hind legs and stubby ears. In length, they average 8 to 10 inches and they look somewhat like a chinchilla.

Although conies are sometimes found at lower elevations, they thrive best at timberline or above. Occasionally they move into the slab piles of early day sawmills, but their natural habitat is the caves formed by loose rocks. In the Rockies, pikas occur from 10,000 to 14,000 feet. Perhaps the most notable thing about conies is the way they make hay. In late summer they gather a variety of green grasses and spread them in the sun to dry. When the hay is cured, they carry it into dry underground passages where it is stored for use in winter. These caches of forage are literally "hay piles" and are common wherever pikas dwell. When food is scarce, the little chief will harvest almost any kind of green plant. In habitats where the tundra plants grow only a few inches high, the hay pile may consist of a mat of vegetation cut to toothpick lengths. How he survives through the long mountain winter on such meager fare is a marvel indeed.

Among the thousands of rocks on a talus slope, conies seem to have several favorite boulders where they like to sit, sun, and catnap. Yet they are such active creatures that they remain on one perch only a short while before scurrying to the next. During harvest time, conies may have several large rocks in a group where they spread and dry their hay.

Because of their small size and protective coloring, conies are hard to see. A good way to spot them is to listen for their call, a plaintive eehk and search in the direction of the sound. They cony will appear at first as a bump on a rock, and if you see him scurry below, stand still and wait. Chances are he will pop up again, for he is curious and wants to see the visitor.

Natural enemies of the pika are the weasel and birds of prey. Sometimes he beats the weasel by changing off with other conies -- ducking out of sight as the weasel races after one of his buddies over the rocks. Hawks and eagles sometimes catch a cony as he dozes or gathers his hay, but this kind of attrition is generally small.

As with other animals, the limiting factor in the cony's numbers is living space. Any talus will support just so many conies, regardless of the predators, and the extras, whether they be old, young, or unfit, must seek new homes or be eliminated by lack of food.

Although man has never been an important enemy of the cony, it is believed Indians used them to a limited extent for food and clothing. Early white settlers also tried the cony, but found him unappetizing. Living as he does in mountain vastness far from man, and apparently having no economic value, it is likely the cony will survive while other species vanish. If you are not a mountaineer or a dweller of the mountain tops you will...have to look on our lodge patches to see the cony.

TAHOSA LEGEND

Many moons ago there was a great forest fire which threatened the Ute Indians with annihilation by starvation. For a moon the great Chief Ogalalla pondered the problem. Finally he decided to send his only son, Tahosa, to find new lands. The medicine man was against sending Tahosa, he felt he could rebuild the forest by magic. Chief Ogalalla rejected the medicine man and sent his son on this very important journey.

As Tahosa traveled he came upon a very strange situation. In a clearing he saw two bull elk fighting to the death. The fight was long and fierce. Tahosa watched until the older bull elk had lost all of his strength. The antlers of the two great animals were locked. The old bull elk had finally laid down and shortly the last great breath of this animal could no longer be heard. It was quiet, deathly quiet. Then suddenly, the younger bull elk tried to break loose. The bull fought and fought, the horns locked tighter and tighter until the younger bull elk gave up. Tahosa watched! It was quiet again. Tahosa knew that he should try and help this young bull elk. It had fought hard and he knew that it deserved to live. Tahosa moved toward the motionless animal, knowing that he must move quickly in order to save the animal's life. With several great blows of his tomahawk, he broke the antlers of the dead elk. The younger elk sprang to his feet, free from the locked antlers. It looked at Tahosa and ran off into the forest.

It was getting late and Tahosa was in great need of rest. Still, not knowing that the medicine man's son was close by, he laid down. The medicine man's son knew he must succeed in order to live up to what his father had told him to do. The medicine man's son came closer to the clearing. Seeing Tahosa, he knew that this was the time to destroy him. As Tahosa started to fall into a deep sleep, the medicine man's son jumped Tahosa.

Tahosa, realizing that he had been ambushed, struggled to save himself. The medicine man's son had the advantage and Tahosa was losing the battle. From the forest came a great crash and the young bull elk, who was saved by Tahosa, came into the clearing. The animal moved forward where Tahosa and the medicine man's son were fighting. The bull elk gave off a loud retort and then, dropping his head, lunged his antlers into the medicine man's son killing him instantly, Tahosa looked to the heavens and thanked the Great Spirit.

After his experience of the past nights, Tahosa continued his journey. He traveled through many lands which he knew would not please his father, Ogalalla. At last he came to a great mountain which he could find no way to cross at first. He knew that he must succeed because the life of his father's people depended upon him. He knew that they must have a green forest to live in.

Tahosa searched and finally found a pass by which young and old alike could climb the mountain. Today this pass is called Buchanan Pass. Tahosa followed the pass across the mountain and down through the forest. As he emerged from the forest, he saw before him a great valley. Tahosa's intelligence told him that this was the future home of Ogalalla's people.

As Indian law required, Tahosa marked the land with a totem pole to show ownership of this new land. He cut a lodge pole pine and carved the totem pole. The totem represented what he had seen when he first came to the forest. At the top was a totem to represent bird life; the great eagles that flew in the valley, the small birds that sang cheerfully in the trees. Next came animal life; the deer, buffalo, bear, elk and small animals. Third, was water life; the many water fowl and fish in the streams. Finally, was the evil spirit which is held down by the other three parts of the totem.

TAHOSA 40 YEARS (1948-1988)

From the beginning Tahosa Lodge was determined to be an active and vital organization. Here is a look at some of the best remembered activities through the years.

By 1951, the Lodge was strong enough to lead in formation of other Lodges in Colorado Councils and it began a custom of installing these new O.A. Lodges with Kola Lodge, in Long's Peak Council. In 1952, the Lodge hosted the 2nd Area Conclave out at Lowry Field, and provided the Ritual Teams for Area 8E during the 1953 Conclave at Boulder.

The Vigil Honor came to be given to Tahosa Lodge's first Arrowmen to be elected to this distinction in 1954. These first Vigil Honor members were; DICK "BUZZ" SULLIVAN (Little Mountain), GEORGE HIDY (Silent Wind), and HOWARD GIFFORD (Running Deer).

Also in 1954 the Lodge began a regular annual "Good Turn Weekend" for the benefit of summer camp preparation in the Council, which progressed to become known as "Beaver Parties" in 1957, and later on became as we know them today - "Cony Parties".

In 1958, Tahosa Lodge 383 installed the new O.A. Lodge for Rocky Mountain Council, Pueblo, Colorado; and in 1959, October 17-19 the first Fall Fellowship has held. Also, in 1959, Mic-O-Say Lodge, in Grand Junction, Colorado, was duly installed by our tahosa Ritual Team. The Cony Chatter became a regular part of Lodge service with the March 1959 edition.

In 1960, the first Father and Son Banquet was held, Lodge training was established as a regular function. Tahosa Lodge 383 received high praise and much recognition for its contribution to the 50th Anniversary National Jamboree of Scouting, in Colorado Springs, for the Lodge's work in providing some 1200 ammunition blocks for "Rifle and Field Sports". The National Rifle Association was so pleased with Tahosa Lodge's work that it took these for use in demonstration matches all over the United States. The Lodge also removed some 4 1/2 tons of old license plates from Denver's City Hall, and turned over this metal collection, at $18.00 a ton, to the Council to improve the Camp.

In 1961, the pocket Lodge flap was revised, beginning our present system of multi-colors in accordance with the earlier approved neckerchief design. At National Conference that year, Howard Gifford received the Order of the Arrow Distinguished Service Award; and within the Lodge Martin Moekserd and L.L. "Tiny" Lewis were presented the first and second Lodge Vigil pen and pencil sets. A Vigil directory was published.

In 1962, the Cony Chatter was established as a monthly publication; and the first of the Cony Parties was held. Brotherhood pins were adopted; and a system of regular recognition for Chapter was set up, with each Chapter having its own Shield. 1962 also saw the beginning of the Lodge's service to Scout Units through publication of the Camping Directory.

Of course, not all Lodge activities were just service projects. There were fun occasions, too. Among these were a "Hopi Hop" dance in 1955, a Red Cloud Chapter sponsored hayride and dance in 1960, and an all Lodge hayride and dance in 1961.

The period of the 1950's and 60's saw many changes in the Lodge, as the growth of Denver Area Council called for new Districts and much alteration of boundary lines. Several Chapters were dissolved as their old Districts were absorbed into new ones. Other Chapters were affected by redistricting too, some growing larger by addition of new territory to the District and others becoming smaller when parts of their membership were transferred to other Chapters as District lines changed.

The opening of Peaceful Valley Scout Ranch in 1965 saw Tahosa Lodge participating in "Operation Noble Mission": On Saturday, July 31, 1965, a fire was carried by truck from Camp Tahosa, where it had been burning all night, to West Denver. Here a torch was lit from the fire and carried to the steps of the State Capitol, where a program of singing and Indian dancing was held. The torch was used to light a fire which burned all night long at the foot of the Capitol. Next morning the fire was again loaded on a truck and taken to Peaceful Valley Scout Ranch. The fire was symbolic of the Scouting Spirit that had been generated at Camp Tahosa for so many years; and it was passed on to the Scouts and Staff of the new Camp.

By 1967 the additional service requests led to the Lodge adopting the policy that Cony Parties would be Chapter rather than Lodge functions thereby making available additional opportunities for Arrowmen to help both Council Camps with needed work.

In 1968 a 20th Anniversary was celebrated at Fall Fellowship at Camp Tahosa. 1970 saw Tahosa Lodge meet the qualifications for National Standard Lodge. And, in 1971, for a brief time, a paper called "The American Indian" became an official section of the Cony Chatter.

1972 saw a collection drive for food and clothing for the Indians who suffered in the South Dakota flood. And, at home, the plaque commemorating the 20th Anniversary of the first Ordeal Ceremony was set in quartz just west of the dining hall at Camp Tahosa.

In 1974, the Lodge hosted the first North Central Region Section 1-A Conclave at Camp Tahosa.

Also to be remembered among our Lodge highlights is the honor give to Bob Ellsperman (Lodge Chief, 1960), who was elected National Conference Chief in 1963, the first Chief to come from the area west of the Mississippi in 48 years. And we must also call to mind that Martin Mockford, in Denver, was National Secretary in 1966.

At the 1978 Fall Fellowship nearly 350 arrowmen gathered at Tahosa to celebrate the 30th Anniversary of the Lodge. Activities consisted of seminars, sailing, eating, fellowship and perhaps the highlight was the luncheon in honor of so many of our great Lodge Leaders of former years.

1981-82 Saw the start of the Elangomat program (Elangomat is a term borrowed from the Lenni-Lenape Indians...It means friend, a simple word ...) by 1983 it's use at Tahosa Lodge began.

After many years of providing great Scouting experiences, and wonderful memories Camp Tahosa was closed as a summer camp. There was a time that its very existence was in doubt. However in September 1983 Camp Tahosa reopened for weekend camping thanks to the Tahosa Alumni Association who spent many hours rebuilding the camp. Today it is used as weekend camping and a High Adventure Scouting Base offering three programs; OKPIK - The national cold weather camping program, teaching a variety of winter camping skills. TAHOSA CHALLENGE - the Denver Area Council's Project COPE, (the national program which stands for Challenging Outdoor Physical Encounter) a program with a series of physical and mental events that has no time limits, and no pass or fail attitude. The last is EAGLE QUEST - a two week mountaineering adventure in the high country of Colorado.

In February, 1987, Tahosa Lodge presented a check for $1,500 to the Denver Area Council SME. Also A "where to go camping" booklet was published and one free copy was distributed to all area units. This was the first book of its kind since 1978. The book "GOAT" Guide to Outdoor Activities for Troops listed favorite campsites of troops. Another project the Lodge had was to establish a truck fund, which provided a new 1987 pickup truck to the Denver Area Council for use at Peaceful Valley Scout Ranch.

Ceremonies and costumes have been a part of the Lodge since its beginning. Both camps have seen much labor to construct Ceremonial Rings over the years; and the Lodge has a number of Indian outfits made by the membership that are used by the dance team and are displayed at many of the Lodge functions.

The past forty years have been busy and fruitful for Tahosa Lodge 383; and we know that the future years will bring many more achievements and traditions.

LITTLE RAVEN DANCE TEAM

In 1960, Harry Howard, the Lodge Advisor for Tahosa Lodge 383, called a meeting of all the chiefs, and invited George Johnson and Louis Boggio. It was determined that these two gentlemen were to be Indian dance instructors and Adner Payne was to be the Advisor for a Lodge Dance Team. A meeting was called; together with the original group of boys it was decided that the Lodge Dance Team would thereafter be called the "Little Raven Dancers". Little Raven is the English interpretation of Tahosa. Many years ago a group of Ute Indians camped on the location we call Camp Tahosa, so the charter members of the Dance Team thought it would be appropriate to name the Lodge Dance Team after the name of our Lodge.

Through Adner Payne's efforts, a place to hold dance practice was given to the Dance Team by the Lowry Post, No. 501, Veterans of Foreign Wars. The location was 1819 Welton Street, Denver. Louis Boggio and George Johnson instructed the dancers in the authentic dances. The early dances taught the charter members included the "sneak-up" dance, the scalp dance, the dog dance, and the plains war dance. Adner Payne's son, Tug Payne, was the hoop dancer.

The dance outfits used by the early members were made entirely by the boys. The colorful attire followed the traditions of the northern plains Indians, including the tribes of the Crow, Sioux, Arapahoe, and Cheyenne.

The dance team performed for numerous Scout and civic groups alike. They danced at many functions in Denver, and throughout Colorado and Wyoming.

The beautiful Little Raven dance patch was designed by Louis Boggio and Edward Quintrall Sr. A blue dance apron was the distinguishing mark of the first patch, the second patch had a red dance apron.

Some of the early dance team members were Dr. Al Rowan, Mike Rowan, Tug Payne, Edward Quintrall, Dusty Quintrall, Gene Fowler, Louis Boggio, and Dave Tranthan. Most of these members were the first of the Little Raven Dancers to perform as a team at the 1963 National O.A. Conference.

Since the 1963 National O.A. Conference, the Little Raven Dancers have performed at many Area, Sectional and National Conferences. The highlight of the team came when it took a trophy at the 1977 National O.A. Conference, held at the University of Tennessee.

Of course, the individual dancers have taken many trophies at Area and Sectional Conferences. Among their highlights are; Steve Dermer taking second place in Oklahoma Feather Dance at the 1975 National O.A. Conference at the University of Miami of Ohio; John Vice taking third place in Straight Dance at the 1975 National; and Larry Barttelbort taking first place in Northern Fancy Dance at the 1977 National O.A. Conference at the University of Tennessee.

Some of the Advisors for the Little Raven Dance Team have been; Adner Payne, Doc Al Rowan, Edward Quintrall, Louis Boggio, Al

Barnes, Bill Hall, and Fred Walmer. The Little Raven Dance Team Chiefs have been as follows; Mike Rowan, Dusty Quintrall, Dave Tranthan, Jim Wilkerson, Chris Barnes, Ed Hunt, Bob Acklan, Steve Thomas, Larry Jenkins, and Steve Dermer.

Many outstanding boys and men have made up the Little Raven Dance Team group. In 1977-78 the team was comparable to the best in the nation. Each category was well represented, as the Little Raven Dance Team was made up from dancers representing various Chapters in the Lodge. Whatever the need, the Little Raven Dance Team could put on a team dance; and the individual boys were well versed in Old Style, Straight Dance, Northern Fancy dance, and Oklahoma Feather Dance. One of the best hoop dancers the Team had was Russ Plate.

TAHOSA LODGE TRADITIONS

No organization can long exist without consciously or unconsciously developing traditions. Our Lodge is no exception to this rule; and we will show how the Lodge has built upon this principle.

By October of the first year, 1948, the name, TAHOSA, was established for Lodge 383, Tahosa (meaning dweller of high places); and our totem was chosen. The Cony, that small rabbit like animal inhabiting the high country above our Camp Tahosa, symbolizes our ties to the outdoors as we are fortunate to experience it in our Council's first camp.

Next came the customs of carving the Ordeal Arrow and notching it for infractions of the rule of silence, which used to be strictly enforced. Another custom adopted, which has since fallen into disuse, was folding the arms with head bowed, Indian style, while saying grace at meals.

In 1950, the Lodge decided that a large stone would serve as Meteu's burden in the Brotherhood ceremony. Candidates for Brotherhood also cut 6 foot, 6 inch poles, with their names and Ordeal dates to be carried to the ceremonial ring, where they were used to complete the stockade.

By 1953 a Lodge flap and neckerchief patch were in production and available. The following years was the Vigil plaque come into being, and a blue strip for Vigil Honor became part of the neckerchief design.

By 1955, the Lodge Chiefs had worked, through various appointed committees to develop a system of recognition for Lodge members. This recognition system, which has been revised through the years, and is being revised again, is our Lodge Beads.

The elangomat program has come into being. The National has changed part of the O.A. Obligation. And the "Tap Out" as we once knew is now a "Call Out".

Although the first 15 years of Lodge existence have given us most of the established customs and traditions we now know, no one can tell what new traditions might still be in the future to provide for the continuing growth and life of the Lodge.

LOCAL CHAPTER CHANGES

In 1954 Tahosa Lodge had 4 Chapters, Medicine Bear (South District), Black Buffalo (Park-Adams District), Red Cloud (West District), and White Hawk (North District).

By 1962 the Lodge and Council had grown; and new Chapters and Districts appeared. Black Buffalo became part of East District; Red Plume Chapter took over in Park-Adams District; Running Antelope was created for Timberline District; Grey Wolf Chapter was created for Foothills District; White Quiver became Chapter for Arapahoe District; Medicine Pipe was new for Centennial District; and Red Fox Chapter was created for Capitol Hill District.

In 1969, because of population shifts, the Council created Frontier District out of Park-Adams and East, with a new Chapter, White

Mustang. Red Fox and Medicine Bear Chapters were dissolved; and Screaming Eagle accompanied the birth of Smoky Hills District. Again with population shifts, and District realigning we now have the Chapters of today;
ARAPAHOE DISTRICT - WHITE EAGLE
CENTENNIAL DISTRICT - MEDICINE PIPE
FRONTIER DISTRICT - WHITE BUFFALO
GATEWAY DISTRICT - KODIAK
TIMBERLINE DISTRICT - RUNNING ANTELOPE
VALLEY DISTRICT - MEDICINE BEAR
Although Chapters have come and gone, Tahosa Lodge 383 continues to grow and prosper.

TAHOSA ELANGOMAT PROGRAM

This program has gone beyond what used to be "Ordeal Work Crew Leaders". First "Elangomat" is a Lenni Lanape word meaning "Friend". As an Elangomat you will be considered a friend even though you are the inspired supervisor of a candidate work crew.

Being an Elangomat you will experience the ordeal once more, but this time you will understand what each of the gruelling tests mean. You will have the opportunity to develop leadership skills, make friends, and develop a deeper understanding of the Ordeal through this experience. Through this one can help candidates understand the purpose of the Ordeal and develop their own understanding of the Obligation.

Tahosa Lodge then benefits. The new members have learned through their contact with the Elangomat during the Ordeal that those who chose them, need them. They are then ready to go back to their Troop and give themselves in "Cheerful Service". All this strengthens the Camping Program in their Troop and helps new Scout experience what Scouting is all about.

AREA 8E CONFERENCES

Prior to NC1A Area, this was known a Area 8E

the first conference was;
1951--Camp Genesee, Denver Area Council Camp
1952--Lowry Air Force Base, Denver Colorado
1953--University of Colorado in Bolder, Colo.
1955--Colorado State University in Ft. Collins
1956--University of Colorado in Bolder, Colo.
1957--Warren Air Force Base, Cheyenne Wyoming
1959--Camp Buffalo Bill Cody, Cody Wyoming
1960--Historical Old Fort Robinson, Nebraska
1961--Colorado Hotel, Glenwood Springs, Colo.
1962--Camp Alexander, Colorado Springs, Colo.

ORDER OF THE ARROW OFFICIAL SONG WORDS BY E. URNA GOODMAN

The Legend of The Order of the Arrow

Years ago, in the dim ages,
In the valley of the Delaware
Lived a peaceful tribe of Indians—
Lenni Lenape their name was.
Deer and bear, wildcat and panther
Through the forest oft they hunted.
On the bosom of the river
Peacefully they fished and paddled.
Round their busy village wigwams
Still the chase they nimbly followed.

In this state of bliss so happy
Many moons they lived contented,
Springtime blossomed into summer,
Summer into autumn ripened,
Autumn died on winter's bosom;
Thus the seasons in succession
Never ending seemed to pass on.

But, behold, a cloud arising
Changed how soon this peaceful aspect.
Neighboring tribes, and distant enemies,
Suddenly disturbed their hunting.
The Chingachgook, aged chieftain
Of the tribe, made quick inquiry:
"Who will go and carry warning
Of this dire and dreadful danger
To all Delawares, our brothers?"
But none wished to make the journey.

Then spoke up the noble Uncas,
Worthy son of the old chieftain,
"O my father, I am ready;
Send me on this gracious errand.
If we would remain a nation,
We must stand by one another.
Let us both urge on our kindred
Firm devotion to our brethren
And our cause. Ourselves forgetting,
Let us catch the higher vision.
Let us find the greater beauty
In the life of cheerful service."

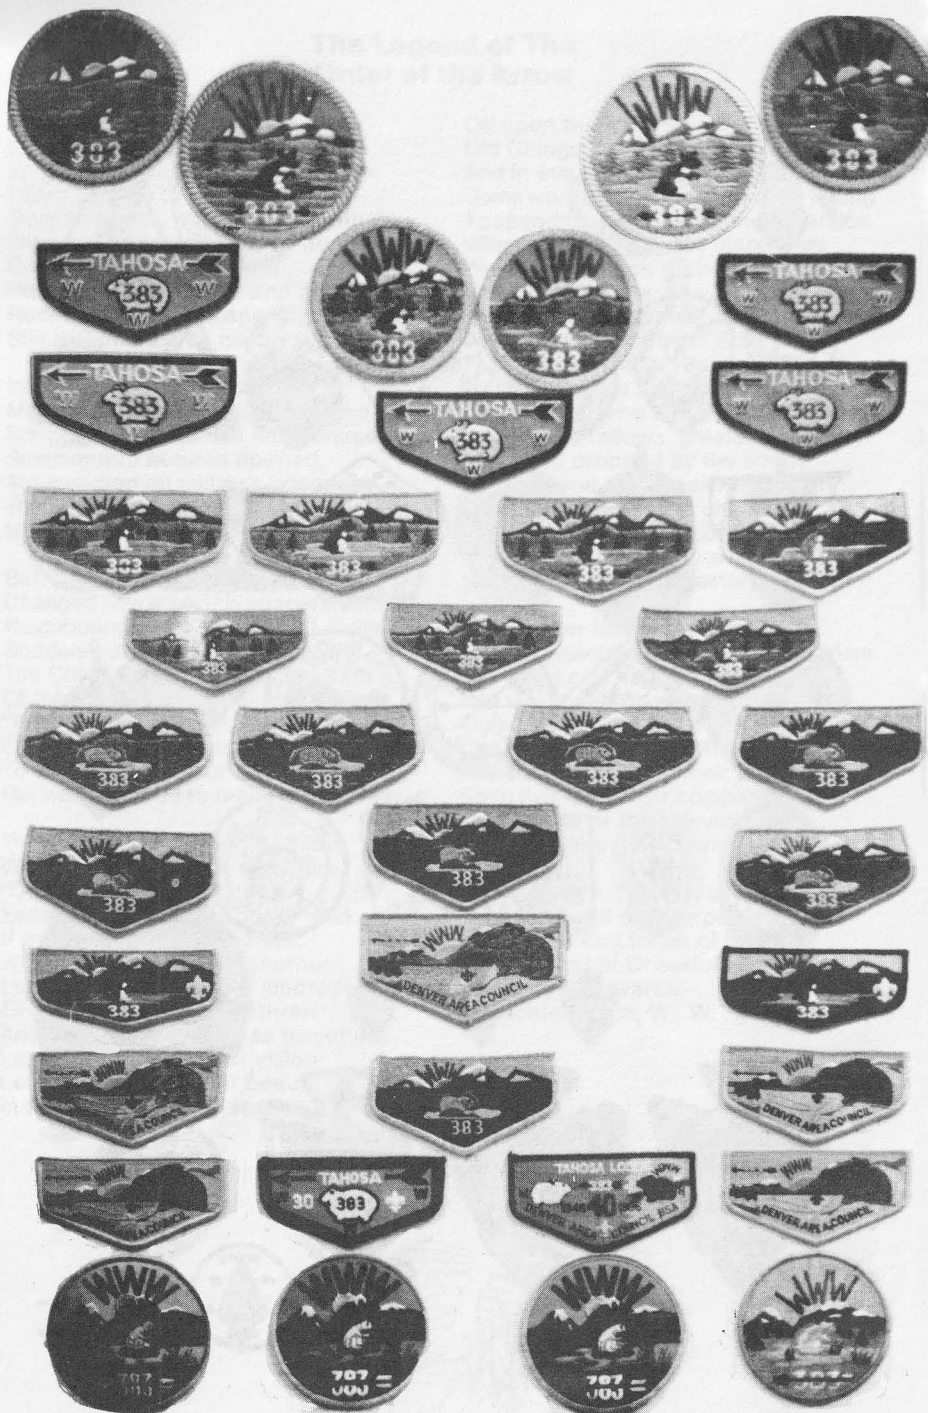

Off upon the trail they started,
Old Chingachgook and young Uncas;
And in every tribal village
Some were found who were quite willing
To spend themselves in others' service.
When at last the fierce marauders
Were forced back to their own country
And peace was declared between them,
They who first themselves had offered
For the service of their Brethren,
To the places most respected
By the chieftain were promoted:
For, said he, who serves his fellows
Is, of all his fellows, greatest!
As a seed dropped by the sower
On good soil bears quick fulfillment:
So this saying of their chieftain
In their hearts found glad acceptance
And they asked that in some manner
He should make its memory lasting.

So together fast and firmly
Chief Chingachgook bound these warriors
In a great and honored Order,
Into which can be admitted
Only those who their own interests
Can forget in serving others.
And so firm must be their purpose
So to live, that their companions
Taking note of their devotion
Shall propose them to the Order.

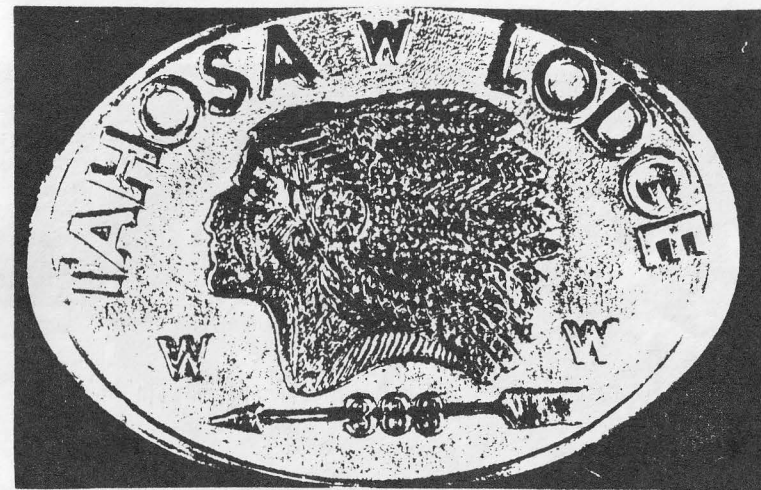

We, therefore, to them succeeding
To the present day perpetuate
The names and token of this
Brotherhood of Cheerful Service
Called by Delawares:
Wimachtendienk, W., W.
